

Romeo und Samurai

Two Alpacas on a Magical Journey

An Adventure Through a Mysterious World

The Star Bear

High above the sky, a giant bear wanders by, made entirely of sparkling stardust.

With every step he takes, glowing lights swirl around him, as if he carries the whole night sky in his fur. Stars dance softly around him—silent, gentle, and endlessly wide.

“I collect shooting stars,” the bear rumbles kindly. “Would you like to take one with you?”

Samurai lifts his head in amazement. “So many shooting stars...” he whispers.

They drift slowly down from the sky—like sparkling wishes on a journey.

One shooting star floats gently toward him. Samurai carefully lifts a foot—and catches it softly. A warm tingling spreads through his belly. The little star glows quietly, as if whispering something just to him.

Romeo lies calmly on the soft clouds, legs tucked beneath him, his eyes fixed on the light. “Mmm... warm. And so wonderfully quiet,” he murmurs happily.

Samurai looks at the small star. He smiles softly—and for a moment, there is only light, silence, and a wish.

The shooting star resting on his leg still glows—and whispers:
“Every wish can come true.”
